About the Artist...

Bob Rohm communicates the externals of his subjects with great vibrancy and power. His inner vision speaks subtly of simple yet complex beauty.

As far back as Bob can remember he has been drawing and painting. He was introduced to the power of painting when at the age of ten a favorite Aunt took him to an exhibition of French Impressionists. This experience overwhelmed and propelled him toward life as an artist. "How exciting it would be to create something that could visually reach people on an emotional and intellectual level," he reflects.

In the years following his graduation from the York Academy of Arts in 1970, he entered into a career in the film and video production business. He began as a camera assistant and quickly became a director, then producer and eventually ran his own production company. The long hours and demands of this business eventually led him to stop painting altogether for nearly ten years. While the physical act of putting paint to canvas was suspended, Rohm said, "I never stopped painting in my mind. Painting was my life's desire and I longed to return to it."

Born and raised in the northeast, Rohm's return to painting was triggered in early 80's when he moved to Texas; the broad vistas and bright, hard sky of the southwest opened up before him. Here was a landscape of stark simplicity and solitary beauty. Bob began to cut back on his production business in order to paint part time, and, in a few short years he became a full time artist.
