

The Bein Gallery philosophy

Classes introduce students of all ages to different art media and techniques. Students are placed in classes based on age and ability. Students increase their visual perception, confidence, listening skills, problem solving abilities, and increase their self esteem. Students are encouraged to participate in student Art shows throughout the year.

Older students learn the fundamentals of design and composition. They cover line, value, color, shape, size, and direction. The principles used are unity, conflict, dominance, repetition, alternation, balance, harmony, and gradation. We encourage exploration of charcoal, pastels (chalk, oil, and water soluble oil) watercolor, acrylics, colored pencils, watercolor pencils, sculpture, and more.

Young students develop fine motor skills and explore their creativity through age appropriate activities including drawing, painting, construction, paper mache, clay, dough and a wide variety of fun activities. Famous artists, art history, and color theory are introduced at various levels throughout the year.

Artist Bio

Linda was born and raised in the Finger Lakes region of New York State. She relocated to Southlake, Texas with her husband and family in the early 90's when she began her career in art.

As a primarily self-taught artist, Linda has attended numerous classes and workshops from local and nationally known artists including Art Locke, Bennie Johnson Wood, Judi Betts, Judi Coffee, Carolyn Reigleman, and Doug Walton. She is a member of The Trinity Arts Guild and the Society of Watercolor Artists. Her works have been exhibited in shows in the Trinity Arts Guild Gallery, member show of the Society of Watercolor artists, and the Guild's traveling art show at local businesses and libraries in the metroplex. She is currently showing works in Angelica, New York. Her paintings are in private collections in New York, Georgia, Illinois, and Texas.

Although she likes to experiment with various media and techniques, transparent water color is Linda's primary media. Her love of the earth and Mother Nature are reflected in her works, even abstracts turn into trees and countryside. Although Linda is predominately a landscape artist she enjoys painting different subject matter using a wide variety of materials. Recently she has been experimenting with equine subjects. Linda's belief that we as people are forever changing and growing is carried through her art with different media and subjects. To stay the same would be... to be left behind.

Linda reserves a portion of her day to share her love of art with children at Kid's Art in her home studio. Students experiment with pencil, pastel, acrylic, watercolor, paper mache, clay, carving, and just about any form of art we can touch, feel and play with.
